ABOUT AUSTRALIA'S AID PROGRAM IN THE PHILIPPINES

Australia's Official Development Assistance to the Philippines for 2015-16 is estimated at A$84 million and will deliver targeted advice and technical assistance that will have a catalytic effect on reform efforts and capacity of the Philippine Government. Given the country's strong economic position, focus will shift from basic service delivery towards supporting the government to better manage its own resources.

Australia's aid will align with the priorities of the Philippine Government which is seeking to put the country on the path of accelerated and inclusive development. The Philippine Administration has an ambitious reform agenda to tackle poverty, improve governance and address corruption, while pushing through important social sector reforms, including education, and promoting peace in Southern Philippines.

Our aid program is organised around the following three mutually reinforcing objectives

ENHANCING THE FOUNDATIONS FOR ECONOMIC GROWTH

Australia will make greater investment in building the foundations for economic growth through carefully targeted investments in infrastructure, aid for trade and education. Education investments will lay the ground work for a better educated workforce and promote higher participation in the formal labour market.

BUILDING STRONGER INSTITUTIONS FOR TRANSPARENT AND ACCOUNTABLE GOVERNANCE

Improving the quality of governance in the Philippines is fundamental to the country's prosperity and stability. In response to the challenge of weak institutions and corruption, we will support the national government as it fosters a culture of accountability and transparency.

IMPROVING CONDITIONS FOR PEACE AND STABILITY

Decades of conflict have resulted in the development of Mindanao, in southern Philippines, slipping behind. Poverty, a lack of basic education and weak governance are ongoing problems in conflict-affected areas. Our programs introduce education in remote communities and provide new opportunities for youth involved with armed groups. We will help the Philippines conduct credible and legitimate elections and improve its accountability to citizens in Mindanao.

ABOUT PAHRODE

The Philippines Australia Human Resource and Organisational Development Facility (PAHRODF) is a program of the Australian Government tasked to support to the Australian Government's initiatives under the Australia-Philippines Development Program Statement of Commitment.

In support of the Statement of Commitment's goal and objectives, PAHRODF provides human resource development and institutional strengthening support to targeted national and local government agencies that play a key role in promoting education reforms, enhancing foundations for economic growth, building better disaster preparedness capabilities, and improving the conditions for peace and security.

It is recognised that for Australian aid to have meaningful impact, it must help improve governance by building capacity of relevant government institutions and facilitating partnerships between government and civil society to create stronger demand and accountability for change.

PAHRODF helps build the foundation of good governance in selected organisations critical in delivering the two countries' mutual development priorities so they can be more capable of delivering services and affecting positive changes in the Philippines. The Facility does this by assisting partners organisations address their human resource and organisational development needs in terms of:

- o Identifying, prioritising, and developing targeted capacities and competencies to support organisational change;
- Making better use of capacities and competencies to improve service delivery; and
- o Sharing and building on enhanced capacities and competencies as basis for continuous improvement and learning.
- o This dictionary on competencies for the public sector is one of the knowledge products that PAHRODF offers to its partners in the HROD community at large.

THE COMPETENCIES: IMPROVING HRMD PROCESS AND SYSTEMS

THE COMPETENCIES: IMPROVING HRMD PROCESSES AND SYSTEMS

In relation to PGDN's implementation of reforms to ensure good governance and effective delivery of essential services, the comprehensive human resource development plan and management strategy (HRDPMS) is considered one of the target reform areas alongside (1) sustainable road maintenance, (2) transparent and accountable budget and expenditure management, (3) fully functioning internal control system, including an independent internal audit, and (4) transparent procurement process.

PAHRODF has been assisting selected LGUs like PGDN to ensure that their reform objectives could be achieved by providing interventions aimed at increasing the LGUs' capability to manage and develop human resources through improved HRMD processes and systems. This assistance includes, among others, enabling the LGUs to develop a "pool of human resources who possess the necessary competencies in order that they can competently perform mandated functions, thus enabling the LGUs to deliver essential services and to meet their priority development directions". The key step to capability building is the development of job competency models.

A Job Competency Model defines the set of knowledge, skills and attributes required to perform job duties and tasks vis-à-vis the goals and strategic directions of an organisation. Each job in the organization has a defined set of competency requirements. Once defined, these job competency requirements become the standard against which decisions in HR such as hiring and placement, training and development, performance management, rewards and compensation, career pathing and succession planning are made. In essence, job competency requirements are the common platform that link and harmonize the various HR systems and processes. When an organization integrates the competency framework into its HR processes, then it would have moved into a Competency-Based Human Resource Management System.

Given the various HR applications of job competency models, the PGDN envisions its initial integration into human resource development. In fact, as PGDN undertakes its HRD Planning, the competency models have been used or referred to.

In developing the PGDN competency framework, the work was guided by appropriate Civil Service Commission (CSC) and Department of Budget and Management (DBM) guidelines. In addition, in defining the KSAs required of employees in leadership and managerial positions, the PGDN Leadership and Managerial competencies were aligned to the Civil Service Commission Leadership and Managerial Competency Framework, the result of an earlier competency profiling intervention similarly accomplished through the assistance of HRODF.

COMPETENCIES DEFINED

Competencies are observable, measurable and vital knowledge, skills and attributes (KSA) which are translations of capabilities essential for organizational success. Competencies describe behaviors that exemplify exemplary performance in an organizational context, which lead to the delivery and/or achievement of desired goals/targets/results. Competencies are the "how" to achieve the "what" or the goals. The "how" pertains to applied knowledge, manifested skills and motives to produce success. Competencies underscore the validity and reliability of the "how" and ensure that achieving the "what" is repeatable.

There are three types of Competencies, namely:

- Core competencies relate to organization's values, mission and strategy
- Technical/Functional competencies pertain to specific bodies of knowledge and skills required to perform the defined activities in a job, function, and industry
- Leadership and Managerial competencies relate to skills needed to perform managerial work and processes

Competencies establish common criteria for hiring, appraising and rewarding people. Likewise, it establishes expectations for performance excellence, resulting in a systematic approach to professional development. In addition, competencies clarify work standards for easier communication of performance expectations, and provide the basis for a more objective dialogue about performance, development, and career related issues. In brief, competencies may be applied to in the HRMD processes and systems, like:

Job/Role Alignment, Talent Profiling, Recruitment, Selection and Placement, Performance Management, Talent Inventory, Learning and Development and Succession Management

ELEMENTS OF COMPETENCY MODELS

DEFINITION OF COMPETENCY

It is a description of the competency including the critical few tasks and outcomes without whichde the capability would not be demonstrated; it may describe important contextual influences (technical requirements, legal certification requirements, and customer or stakeholder requirements)

The definition provides the basic components of a competency which may describe the key activities or elements of the work covered by the competency. These basic components describe, in outcome terms, functions a person is able to perform in a particular aspect of work as a result of the competency.

COMPETENCY LEVEL/RUBRIC

A rubric articulates in progressing order, the quality of each criterion used for assessing a particular type of work or performance. It is used also for the purpose of producing assessments that are far more descriptive than a single, holistic grade or judgment. For flexibility in expressing these gradations, four-level rubrics were used for the competencies with the following descriptive terms (coded as BIAS): Level 1 is BASIC, Level 2 is INTERMEDIATE, Level 3 is ADVANCED, Level 4 is SUPERIOR.

Instead of merely saying that an individual is "very good," or "outstanding" a rubric-based competency model describes the manner in which a behavior is demonstrated on one or more dimension. These descriptions are illustrated by Behavioral Indicators.

BEHAVIORAL INDICATORS

These are used to provide an objective description of what might be viewed as demonstration of the competency. They provide evidence that officers/staff either have or do not have the expected or required level of proficiency.

Behavioral indicators, in the Models are simply examples of what behaviors could look like in each of the levels or BIAS, and are not to be inclusive of all behaviors that demonstrate each level of performance for the competency.

DEVELOPING COMPETENCY MODELS

DEVELOPING COMPETENCY MODELS

BORROW AND BUILD APPROACH

The following Competency Models were developed using the Borrow and Build Approach. As differentiated from Competency Models Building Approach (which is to develop competency models based on analysis of job duties and tasks and without referring to related models from other organizations) and from Buying Competency Models (which is acquiring Competency Models that are considered applicable to one's organization from commercial sources with an existing database), the Borrow and Build Approach is a combination of referring to applicable Competency Models of other organizations and customizing it title/name, definition, and behavior indicators to ensure the most effective application to HR processes and system in view of the organization's vision-mission, strategic goals and directions.

DATA GATHERING TO BUILD

The Approach begins from the gathering of pertinent documents (Vision-Mission, strategic Goals and directions) and referencing from various sources significant to the operations of the LGU Offices/units specially the mandates from and/or directives of national government units concerned. Referencing tasks entailed interviews with officials or designated representatives of the provincial/regional offices of DBM, BLGF, NEDA, COA and DENR.

Data Gathering also took into consideration the processes and the expected outputs of the Offices/units, and captured the KSA necessary to effectively and efficiently deliver the targets/goals.

Another, important component of the Data Gathering stage was the determination of sample behavioral indicators for each of the initially themed KSAs, with tentative Competency titles. The participants provided descriptions of behaviors that officers and staff are required to manifest as proofs of having the initially identified competencies.

DRAFTING AND BORROWING

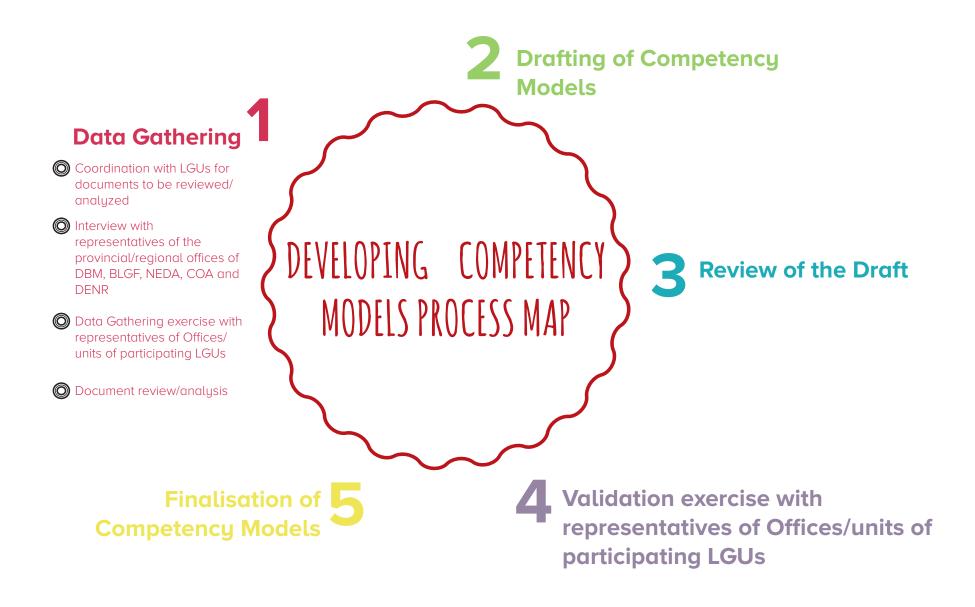

During the drafting of the Competency Models, the Borrow Approach was effected. During the writing of the first drafts of the Competency Models, information from documents provided by the LGUs and Interviews were referenced against other Competency Models of both government agencies and private corporations. Relevant terms and concepts were captured (or borrowed) from the external references and used to complement the initial outputs.

The competency laundry list were then filtered to determine the Core and Technical following the definition mentioned above --- the consideration being, KSA that are responsive to the demands/requirements of select processes specific to particular Offices/units are considered Technical Competencies, while those that were readily considered applicable and necessary for all officers and staff of the LGU were classified as Core Competencies.

Finally, the draft Models were subjected to Validation exercise (last part of the 2nd Phase of the TA) to get first hand views/insights from selected incumbents per Office/units [see page 82 for general insights on Validating Competency]

VALIDATING MODELS

VALIDATING THE MODELS

Consistent with the essence of Competency as briefly explained above, the development of the Models was anchored on the goals, the priority development thrusts and strategic directions of PGDDN. Having referred to documents and resources provided by HRMO Officers/Staff of PGDDN our data gathering exercises resulted into the identification of KSAs which further led to the initial lists of competencies, both core and functional.

From the competencies that were initially identified, the ones that were considered necessary and applicable across all offices/units to achieve the goals and to respond effectively to strategic directions were classified as Core, while those that pertain to specific KSAs required to perform the defined activities of particular mandates, tasks and responsibilities of different offices/units were designated as Technical Competencies.

The elements of draft Competency Models (Core and Technical) were validated with the following as guiding principles

- Competency models are appropriate and complete vis-à-vis goals, development thrusts, mandates and strategic directions of PGDDN
- Operational definitions of the competencies covers the significant sample tasks and outcomes without which the capability would not be demonstrated
- Sample behaviors of the draft competency models sufficiently considers the demonstrable capabilities staff and officials of the select offices
